

LOOKBOOK - CARE

With a tradition of craftsmanship since 1950 we feel confident to say that we are a company that has the experience and knowhow to set the standard for healthcare environments of the future. For sure, future healthcare companies will not settle with yesterday's furniture. But what does the health-care environment of the future look like?

We see a major potential for growth and development in the healthcare industry, in Sweden as well as internationally. The future healthcare environment puts completely different demands on design and functionality. While new functional requirements will lead to new clever solutions, the design will increasingly harmonise with other public spaces in the society.

The healthcare industry is in a strong development phase. Our ambition is to provide a safe and stimulating environment that includes everybody involved, such as patients, staff and relatives. In the future, it will become even more important to design environments that facilitate and streamline work in order to save time and energy for healthcare professionals.

Inclusive design and broader spectrum

For several years, NC has been working with INCLUSIVE DESIGN, a product philosophy aimed at giving people with different needs, abilities and opportunities the possibility to be an integral and active part of society.

This means, for example, that we should be able to offer products in different price ranges, and that it should be easy to understand what you get if you pay more. What distinguishes the standard chair from the more exclusive one? And what requirements are met by respective products? We must also be able to explain how the optimal product choice can actually contribute to increased safety, time-saving routines, reduced risk of bodily wear and tear, higher well-being and, above all, giving the customer the most sustainable interior design over time. Both functionally and financially.

Focus on the individual

To succeed, we need to focus on the individual's possibilities rather than limitations, as well as constantly develop and create functionality and ergonomics tailored to the needs of the patient. At the same time, it is important that we create a comfortable atmosphere for relatives based on empathy and respect. It is of course a challenge for us to balance the above-mentioned demands and requirements, but with many years of experience being a manufacturer of healthcare environments, we feel confident that we can deliver.

NC's high ambitions are expressed in the fact that we constantly identify new demands in the healthcare environments, demands requiring an increasingly higher level of customised products. Right now, we are in the midst of several projects where we have a close collaboration with users to identify development needs and to create future solutions from a user perspective. In all of this, we want to be a strong driving force in the development process within our industry in order to be a leading manufacturer of future generations of healthcare interior solutions.
